AIVC workshop on “Is ventilation the answer to indoor air quality control in buildings? Do we need performance-based approaches?” - Brussels, March 14-15, 2017 - Evaluation report summary

Evaluation report - Summary of main results

The evaluation questionnaire of the AIVC workshop on: “Is ventilation the answer to indoor air quality control in buildings? Do we need performance-based approaches?” was sent out to all 70 attendees of the event. The summary report that follows is the result of the feedback from 43 of the participants that filled in the evaluation form.

General outcomes:

- The conference met the expectations of 98% of the participants
- 93% of the participants would recommend the conference to others
- 79% of the participants would attend another conference on this topic

Conference Sessions Content: 95% of the participants agreed that the content of the conference sessions was appropriate and informative

Quality of information presented: 83% of the participants rated the quality of information presented as excellent or satisfactory

Conference Organisation: 100% of the participants agreed that the conference was well organised

Registration Process: 88% of the participants were very or rather satisfied with the registration process

Conference Publicity: 72% of the participants were very or rather satisfied with the conference publicity

Conference Venue: 82% of the participants were very or rather satisfied with the conference venue

Food & beverages: 77% of the participants were very or rather satisfied with the food and beverages

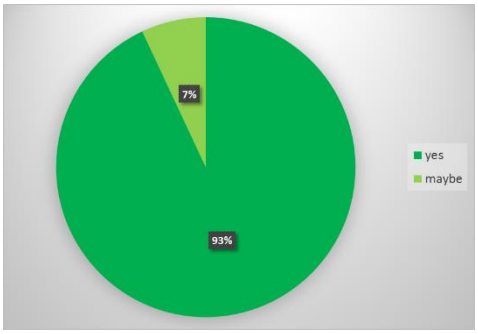

Figure 1: Would you recommend this conference to others?

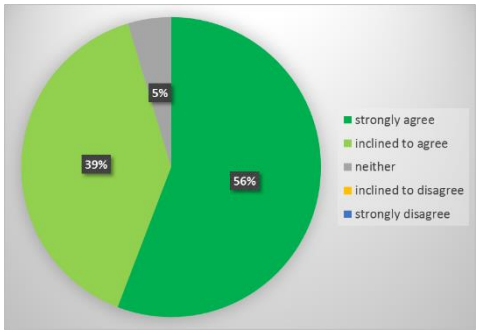

Figure 2: The content of the conference sessions was appropriate and informative